ADAPTIVE REUSE

AND JUSTICE FOR ALL

The James B. Lee Justice Center in Salt Lake is being honored for its transformation of a historic building into modern law offices while preserving its architectural legacy. Led by And Justice for All, the project involved extensive renovations to restore the building's facade and upgrade its structure, making it accessible and sustainable. Key innovations include historical accuracy, sustainable practices, community engagement, and inclusive design. The project's long-range impact includes historic preservation, economic revitalization, and enhanced community integration. Recognition is due to And Justice for All, Kimball Investment Company, and Squires Construction for their exceptional contributions to preserving Utah's architectural heritage and ensuring a vibrant future.

THE MERCANTILE

The Mercantile recognition is for its transformation of the historic Ogden Union Bus Depot into a vibrant marketplace and office space. Within the past five years, this project revitalized the vacant building on Historic 25th Street, preserving its architectural heritage while activating the site for commerce and community engagement. Through a collaborative partnership between Kaffe Mercantile, Roosters Brewing Co., and Beehive Cheese, The Mercantile offers a dynamic destination featuring a coffee shop, marketplace, and office spaces. Additionally, the integration of historical artifacts, like the restored bus bench, honors the building's past and fosters community connection. The Mercantile exemplifies successful adaptive reuse by repurposing a historic structure to meet contemporary needs while preserving local heritage.
